

Privacy policy or how I keep your data safe

What is a privacy policy? A privacy policy sets out the rules that Dr Silke Newman has to follow to keep personal data safe.

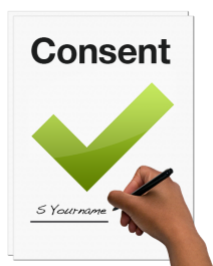

As part of our work I keep information about you to help us remember what we talk about. This includes your name, contact details and carer/support details.

The information that I keep about you will only be used for my work with you.

I will keep your information private, safe and secure. We will never share your personal information without your agreement.

I will only share your information with people you give me permission to do so.

If I find that there is a serious risk to you or to someone else I may have to contact other professionals without your permission.

But I will always try to tell you first if I need to talk to others about you.

If you have any questions you can contact me on info@drsilkenevman.co.uk
